

Marks on the Map: Facilitators Road Map

After giving everyone time in pairs or small groups to look over their cue cards (or two or three, depending on numbers and time) they have taken, the facilitators then ask people to present what they now know about various moments and movements in the life journey of Otilie Abrahams. The shape and direction of time is always up for dynamic debate, but below is the (chronological) order we use in the unfolding of this history together. We hope to continue to add important issues, moments, organizations, debates, ideas, people, and places to this picture raised in ongoing conversations in these workshops and beyond.
